Who Is "Judge" Adams?

The Only Republican Editor in this District Says:—

"HE IS A CARPETBAGGER AND UNQUALIFIED FOR CIRCUIT JUDGE."

EDITOR NEWS:

If the time has ever been in the history of this country when the people, irrespective of party or creed, should be aroused to the condition of affairs that confront them and awakened to a sense of duty, surely that time is at hand in this the 23rd Judicial district.

In the outset, let me say that I mean to "speak the truth and shame the devil." If those who are now in authority do not measure up to the standard of efficiency heretofore maintained and required by an exacting constituency, the writer is not to blame; if they do not possess the necessary qualifications to properly administer and to perform the duties of the high offices they occupy the people are not to blame.

When the venerable Judge Riddell laid down with his life the office of circuit judge, petty politics and a pennant politician, a subordinate officer of the State, gave us J. P. Adams, who in turn dictated the appointment of Kelly Kash for Commonwealth's Attorney.

Who is Judge (J) Adams? He is a man who has been in the Commonwealth for some time, and he is a man who is a carpet-bagger, and besides is unqualified for Circuit Judge.

Let's see. Prior to his nomination for Commonwealth's Attorney he was not actively engaged in the practice of law, but claimed to be a business man, who, because of his wealth and living in the strong Republican county of Magoffin, was given the nomination, but whose election is still a mooted question, for had the well-known frauds perpetrated in Magoffin county in that election become a matter of record, the "Judge" would still be a "business man" back in Magoffin. Be that as it may, he got the office and how has he conducted it? With good intentions, evidently, but with such marked inability and inferiority as compared with his predecessors and certain well-known lawyers with whom he has had to contend, as to become a matter of common notoriety. In fact, his inability to cope with these lawyers in the trials of criminals became so potent and generally understood that in nearly every murder and in many other felony cases that came on for trial, the friends of the deceased, or the injured party, in order to uphold the law, felt duty bound to go to the expense of employing other attorneys to assist in the prosecution.

It is a well-known fact that Col. Byrd and Judge Redwine, representing their respective law firms, have received several thousand dollars alone, to say nothing of a score or more of other prominent criminal lawyers who have been employed more or less throughout the district to assist Mr. Adams.

It can safely be said that before the people can get rid of "Judge" Adams and his proteges, as Commonwealth's Attorney, they will have paid over $10,000 to outside attorneys to assist these officials, whom the law requires shall be sufficiently qualified to protect their rights and uphold the laws of the country.

Moreover, "Judge" Adams was Commonwealth's Attorney for nearly three years, during which time he never had a civil case of any importance, nor did he give any noticeable attention to the civil practice, or make any preten-sions of being a civil lawyer. Nevertheless, he is Circuit Judge, whose duty it is to pass upon the rights and liberties of those accused of crime. Shades of Elliott and Lilly!

"Oh, well," says the "Judge," "crime has so increased and the criminal docket grown so large I had no time to give to civil cases."

True, "Judge," crime has increased alarmingly during your term of office, and no more fruitful cause can be given than the acquittal of so many criminals. The "Judge" could not find "time," perhaps, for the civil practice, although civil cases are always set for the last week of court after the criminal cases are disposed of.

Mr. Byrd found time to be on one side or the other in most of the important civil cases during his term, but Col. Byrd was and is a fine lawyer, who never needed or scarcely had employed counsel to help him prosecute criminals.

As to young Mr. Kash, comment is scarcely necessary. He is to be a judge, and he is a man who is a carpet-bagger, and besides is unqualified for Circuit Judge.

CARPET-BAGGERS.

Do you remember the Carpet-bag days in the South, the days just after the Civil War, when the men of the South could not hold office and the mimic men of the North swooped down upon the beautiful Southland, with their carpet-bags in their hands, and ground the people into dust? If you are old enough; if you lived in those days of blood and tears, you remember the Carpetbaggers, and when you remember them your southern heart bleeds for the wrongs done you and yours. If you did not live then your parents did, and they have told you about those days and those things and you have read about them.

Men of the 23rd Judicial District, men of the Kentucky River Valley, this thing is about to be repeated on you and at some expense. James P. Adams, of Magoffin county is among you, Carpet-bag in his hand, trying to take the office of Circuit Judge. He is a Carpet-bagger. He cares for nothing but office. He is a hungry and a thief for office.

He comes to put into practice among you the methods of Magoffin, to build up around himself a machine and to deprive you of what is yours. Arise and drive the invader out. Your liberty is at stake. Down with this arch-carpet-bagger! — Beattyville Enterprise.

VOTE FOR STAMPER Is the Advice of a Lee County Republican.

BEATTYVILLE, KY., Oct. 14.
EDITOR NEWS:

In the election of a man to represent the Commonwealth in this Judicial district, men should lay down their politics and elect a man for this responsible position who is qualified and in every way capable of representing the interest of every citizen in the district, let him be a Democrat or a Republican, or of any other political faith.

In the first place it is known by all in the district that Kelly Kash is a man who is a carpet-bagger, and besides is unqualified for Circuit Judge. Let's see. Prior to his nomination for Commonwealth's Attorney he was not actively engaged in the practice of law, but claimed to be a business man, who, because of his wealth and living in the strong Republican county of Magoffin, was given the nomination, but whose election is still a mooted question, for had the well-known frauds perpetrated in Magoffin county in that election become a matter of record, the "Judge" would still be a "business man" back in Magoffin.

Woman's World

MRS. HERBERT ASQUITH.

The Brilliant Wife of the Premier of England.

It would probably be no exaggeration to say that Mrs. Asquith, wife of the premier of England, is the most brilliant woman in England. As a girl she was so brilliant that young men fought shy of her, and she was always to be found surrounded by elderly statesmen or middle aged men of tremendous learning and sparkling wit. There was nothing of the bluestocking about her, though she could talk entertainingly on any subject. She was dashing, volatile, sprightly, delightfully inconsistent and possessed a fund of deep womanly sympathy that endeared her to men who were really great. Her friends of her girlhood were such men as Gladstone, Tennyson and Bulwer. The German emperor took with her a special interest and danced endless waltzes with her at Buckingham palace, and she was a friend of the czar of Russia. Margaret Tonnant was the third daughter of the late Sir Charles Tonnant, who was an enormous fortune and who was married and in the manner of a queen. She was married with whom her husband had been married being Lord Rosebery and Arthur Balfour, but she reached the age of thirty and was still a maid. Then, in 1894, society was amazed by the announcement of her engagement to Herbert Asquith.

Mr. Stead was truly prophetic then when he wrote of "helping a statesman to climb the steep that lead to the premiership of the empire" for Mrs. Asquith has guided her husband's course with so sure and skillful a hand that he is today, thirteen years after Mr. Stead wrote those lines, premier of the empire.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure.

Mrs. Sarah S. Jackson in the Designer has a talk on how a beautiful figure may be acquired, and this is what she says:

"One of the best ways to obtain a graceful carriage and beautiful figure is by practicing deep breathing in conjunction with various exercises."

"The modern woman, whether she be in the crowded city or the smaller towns and country places, does not exercise enough, and as a consequence her body suffers. Or perhaps she does exercise vigorously in one particular direction, thereby developing one portion at the expense of another. This is wrong. She should be symmetrically developed throughout."

"The writer then gives the following exercise to be tried in the morning when you first get up:

"Begin by bending your head over to the right side as far as it will, and while holding it in this position slowly turn it to the back, to the left and to the front. Now reverse the movement, keeping this up about ten minutes."

"For enlarging the arms she recommends playing ball for ten or fifteen minutes a day. Besides being capital fun, you'll soon have lovely rounded arms and be able to wear short sleeves."

Another exercise, called the fan exercise, is for reducing the waist. It is also a good general developer of the whole body. It strengthens the back, benefits the lungs and makes the whole body supple. This is the method: Secure two little Japanese paper fans and, standing in front of an open window, draw a deep breath, filling your lungs to their fullest extent. Now, holding your breath, raise your arms straight above your head, holding a fan in each hand. Keep your knees perfectly straight and bend over until the fans touch the floor; then recover original position and exhale.

This is to be kept up for ten or fifteen minutes unless you are very tired. It is well to bear in mind that vigorous exercise, and a great deal of it, must be the order of the day. In the development of the chest there are many ways of obtaining the desired extra inches, but massage and deep breathing are all that is necessary, and if practiced for six weeks by the thin chested girl this result will be surprising.

The joint debate between John W. Langley and Judge Amos Davis, candidates for Congress, was well received here Monday by both parties. There was a large crowd present and the antagonistic spirit usually at such meetings was not in evidence.

Judge Adams says he needs the office. This is a great mistake. He may need the pay but he has no earthly use for the office, and the office needs him less. If he had studied law instead of idling his time away and living in bed till 8 or 9 o'clock he might have prepared himself for that office.—Crockettville Enterprise.

The election of a competent Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney is of far more importance to the people of this Judicial district than the election of a President or a Congressman, because the protection of our lives, our liberties and our property rests much more upon the former offices than the latter. We can live under either Mr. Bryan or Mr. Taft as President, or under Mr. Davis or Mr. Langley as Congressmen, as they are all qualified to hold the offices they seek and are seldom among us, but as to the office of Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney it makes a difference who is elected, as we always with us.

As to the qualifications of the candidates for these offices, it is needless for us to comment, as the humblest citizen in the district knows that there is no comparison between them. Our opposition to the present incumbents and Republican nominees is not based on personal or political grounds, the claims of a very few who are our personal and political enemies, to the contrary notwithstanding, but on account of their inexperience and inability to cope with the situation and carry on the business of the courts.

If these young men, who, by the way, are nice fellows, would devote the next fifteen or twenty years to the study and practice of law, they might be able to hold these offices with credit. Anyway, it would give Mr. Adams time to get the Licking river mud off of his shoes.

A Card.

To the Voters of the Tenth Congressional District of Kentucky: I am opposed to taking the tariff off of logs, ties or lumber of any kind and will never vote to do so, but would be in favor of doubling the tariff on the same if it would raise the price of the same under this Republican party.

AMOS DAVIS,
Democratic Nominee 10th Congressional District of Ky.

Farmers Wanted.

Wanted:—3,000 practical farmers who would like to own homes of their own. The Government has nearly 200,000 acres of land lying under the various irrigation projects throughout the West for which water will be available next season. The farm unit on these projects varies in most cases from 40 to 60 acres of irrigable land, depending upon location. In many sections a tract of grazing land has been included in the farmers unit wherever practicable, bringing the total up to 100 acres.

The only charge for these farms besides the regular land office fee for filing, is the actual cost of getting water to them, and payment may be made in ten annual installments, without interest.

These irrigation projects are scattered over the entire arid region, from Canada to the Mexican line. In consequence, every variety of crop grown in the temperate zone can be raised under them. If you would like a fruit or dairy farm, a garden for market truck, a tract for diversified farming, hog or poultry raising, or a tract for the Statist, write to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., for particulars.

Discovery of a Planet.

The glory of discovering the big planet belongs to two men. An astronomer in Cambridge and another in Paris, each quite ignorant of what the other was doing, applied themselves to the task simultaneously. Each independently declared that if the laws of motion and gravitation were true there must be at a certain spot in the heavens a certain mass of matter hitherto unknown to astronomers. The presence of such a mass of matter in such a place would account, they said, for the disturbances that had been noticed in the movements of Uranus. When the telescope was turned to the point indicated the planet which we now know as Neptune was discovered. This brilliant piece of work was done by Leverrier and Adams on the 23d day of September, 1846.

Each acquitted himself with honor. Judge Davis spoke ably, discussing the evil effects of too great a tariff, advocated by the Republican party, which had proved to be a power by which the rich might gather wealth, but obtrusive and burdensome to the common people. The Democrats of Crockettville will give them their undivided support the third of November. Also some of our Republicans will vote for them.

Your correspondent was called to visit Gran Baker last Saturday for the purpose of holding religious services and to solemnize the rites of matrimony between Joseph Johnson and Miss Rusla Baker, which occurred immediately at the close of the preaching. This was followed by a number of pistol shots. Upon investigation it was discovered that two bands of drunken men, one from Buffalo and the other from Long's creek, had met in the yard, and each gang undertook to disarm the other. Two or three shots were fired and some one called out that John Baker was shot and killed. Mrs. Baker, who is in bad health, fell unconscious and it was some time before she was revived. No one, however, was killed or hurt. It is hoped that law and order will in the future be restored and the unlawful sale of intoxicants prohibited in Breathitt county.

Having Fine Meeting.
The meeting at the Baptist church which has been in progress for the past ten days has produced quite a number of additions to the church and the interest awakened. Rev. Hunt has preached the gospel with great earnestness and power and the attendance has been good each night. Not only the church but the public in general have felt the influence of the meeting and no doubt lasting good will result from it.

Religious Notes.

Rev. H. J. Derthick, of Hazel Green, will preach at the Christian church Sunday morning and evening. Bro. Derthick is too well known to the people of Jackson to urge them to attend. Come and receive a hearty hand grasp and hear a sermon that will do you good.

The meeting at the Baptist church will continue over Sunday. Friday at 7:30 p. m. will be Dr. Hunt's last sermon. The pastor will preach Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. Morning subject "The Christian's Hope." Subject at 7 p. m. "In A Pin and How to Get Out." Welcome.

Friday at 2:30 p. m. at the Baptist church Dr. M. P. Hunt will give the story of "How I Became a Baptist."

College Notes.

Miss Cecile Bidez, teacher of music in Lees Collegiate Institute, has resigned her position to accept a similar one in Union College, Barbourville, Ky., at an increased salary. Dr. J. W. Easley, president of Union College, was in Jackson between trains last Saturday and secured Miss Bidez's services in a short time. Miss Bidez is a most excellent musician, and Dr. Easley's professional courtesy (?) exhibited in the transaction is thoroughly appreciated by the trustees of Lees Collegiate Institute. The vacancy will be filled at once.

Miss Mary Agnes Willson, of Shelbyville, has been appointed by the trustees of Lees Collegiate Institute assistant teacher in the primary and intermediate departments of the school. Miss Willson is a graduate of Science Hill, an English and Classical School for Girls at Shelbyville, and comes to Jackson with the highest recommendations as a scholar. She is a teacher by inheritance, as her father is one of the most successful teachers in Kentucky, and Miss Willson will doubtless be a valuable addition to the corps of teachers of Lees Institute. We are glad to see this evidence of the success of the school.

Deaths.
James D. Willson died at her home, near Stevenson, last Sunday night, after a short illness. She was about 75 years of age and was the widow of James D. Willson, who died about eight years ago. She was a daughter of Daniel Hagins and was the oldest of a family of nine children, all of whom are living except one. Her friends were as numerous as her acquaintances and she will be sadly missed in her neighborhood. Her remains were buried in the family grave yard at the old Hagins homestead.

The Slump in Hogs.

Several amusing but true stories about hogs have been told during the present drought, showing how strange supply and demand operate. Two years ago a measly little sow and pigs readily sold anywhere from $25 to $35. Now a fairly good sow and litter of pigs can scarcely be given away. We hear of one instance where one farmer put out four good hogs to be fattened on the shares and gave besides nine shoats for good count. Another farmer had five shoats he offered at 25 cents a head—$1.25 for the lot—and got no buyer. Another offered a lot of shoats that averaged 54 pounds at $1.25 per head and failed to find a purchaser. Over a hundred of these little shoats, some of them good stock, sold for the small sum of $8. The purchaser resold the lot at $10 and the second buyer sold the outfit for $12.—Brooksville Review.

You are invited to call and inspect my new line of Fall and Winter Hats, which I have just received from the city. I have marked down the prices to suit the times. MOLLIE FIELDS.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

In choosing a grape fruit see that it is heavy in proportion to the size. A dry fruit is very light.

To polish a looking glass first rub it with a duster wrung out of cold water and dipped in whiting and then polish with a dry cloth.

If canned fruits are opened an hour or two before using, the excluded oxygen is removed and the flavor improved. Turn out of the jar at once.

As soon as a salt hain or tongue is cooked remove it from the boiling water to a pan of cold water for a few seconds. This will loosen the skin, which may be easily peeled off.

To prevent cabbage boiling over saves time both in stirring the cabbage down and also in cleaning the stove afterward. If a piece of lard about the size of a walnut be dropped into the cabbage pot it will not boil over.

To clean candlesticks, whether of enameled or plain metal, fill them with boiling water. Do not allow the water to stand any time, but pour it away and thoroughly dry the candlestick with a cloth. In this way dirt and grease are removed without doing damage to the color or substance of the candlestick.

To dry clean hair bent some flour and in this put the lace, covering it entirely. Leave it an hour or two, then rub it lightly and shake it well. Unless it has been really very much soiled it will then look like new once more. Valuable lace that cannot bear rubbing may be covered with French chalk and laid aside, wrapped in blue paper. Between the pages of a book for a day or two. The chalk will absorb any grease and leave the lace looking fresh and clean.

Sultana Caramels.

Sultana Caramels.—Put into a saucepan one pound of granulated sugar, moisten this with a gill and a half of milk. When it boils, add no ounce of butter. Cook, stirring constantly to prevent burning, for about fifteen minutes. A little of the mixture should then be tested by pouring out a tiny portion into a cup of cold water. If, when cool, this is found to be firm to the touch, it may be removed from the fire, but it will probably take about thirty minutes, the time depending upon the speed with which the mixture is allowed to boil. Have ready half a tumbler of the best quality sultana raisins which have been carefully picked over and slightly chopped and the same quantity of chopped walnuts. Add these when the mixture is sufficiently cooked.

The result is always the same. Cash buys goods cheaper than credit. A cash business enables a merchant to sell better goods for less money than credit business. Please note carefully the following reasons why it pays to buy for cash:

First—A few cents saved on several purchases counts up a great deal in the aggregate.

Second—We buy our goods for cash, and get discounts and inducements which we pass on to our customers.

Third—Selling for cash, we give our customers the difference between credit and cash prices.

Fourth—Selling for cash, we do not lose $2,000 or $3,000 annually on bad debts, which credit houses have to make their good customers pay or go out of business.

Fifth—We want to establish a big trade, and we know that close prices and good, honest goods will do it.

Sixth—We will positively not be undersold by any other store.

Seventh—If you would get in the habit of buying for cash you would get in the habit of saving money.

Eighth—We can and will make closer prices than any other store in the city. We are not a hardware store, we are a cash business.

For a full and complete list of our goods and prices, call on us cheerfully as we receive a lot.

gan sent the dove of peace screaming up a tree. I didn't know you visited the city hall too."

"I don't, as a rule," answered Gibbs. "I came here with Mrs. Bennett and Miss Walworth. I wanted a glimpse of the man who can make one pen stroke that will send Borough Street railway stock up to 100 or down to 10."

"Do you mean," broke in Dallas, "that Mr. Bennett can really have such an effect on the stock market?"

"That and more," Gibbs assured her. "Why, the mere rumor that he meant to veto the Borough's franchise bill has sent the stock tumbling eight points since the market opened today."

"What power for one man!" exclaimed the girl, turning to Bennett in surprise. "And are you going to veto it?"

"Office secrets," replied Alwyn festively. "Hands off."

"Veto it?" echoed Gibbs, with a laugh. "Of course he isn't. It would be too hard upon his friends—unfair and unkind, to say the least."

"But why?" queried Dallas, forestalling Alwyn. "He was about to speak."

"Because," cut in Gibbs before Bennett could interfere, "the men who are backing the Borough bill are the men who made him mayor. It wouldn't be square for him to turn his new power against the very men who gave him that power. Now, would it?"

"By the men who are backing the bill whom do you mean?" asked Bennett.

"Oh, I just spoke in generalities. As a matter of fact, the break in the price today was lucky for those who wanted to buy."

"An' your firm's done most of the buying," he told. "Interpolated Phelan."

"We have a great deal of the stock," admitted Gibbs. "But you see, Bennett, you can make me break me. I place myself in your hands."

"I see you are taking a most unfair advantage of me, Mr. Gibbs," retorted Alwyn, with some heat. "You have no right to thrust this information on me and to appeal to me."

"But I was only—"

"You were trying to influence my action toward the Borough bill. You cannot do it."

"Why, I didn't think you'd be angry at—"

"I'm not. Let's drop the subject, please."

"I only answered Miss Walworth's questions," Gibbs said.

"We'll leave Miss Walworth's name out of the matter, please," replied Bennett.

"Certainly, if you want," answered Gibbs. "But the time is up. Good day, Bennett. I'm sorry your firm's done so much of the buying."

"I'll be on my way, too," announced Phelan, breaking the awkward pause that followed Gibbs' exit. "Ladies, I'm proud to have met you. If either of you knows a family wanting an outfit, just drop me a line, and I'll see they get it. As they needn't come from my ward neither."

"That's bad politics, alderman," laughed Bennett.

"It's good humanity, though. There's two things I love to do—first, to down the man who's me enemy, and, second, to give good times to folks who's strangers to him. Goodby, your honor. I'll be in again now I've found my way, ladies."

"Alwyn," said Mrs. Bennett as the alderman bowed himself out with many courtesies, "I want to see Cynthia. Can I go into her office now, or is she too busy? I'll be back in a few minutes, Dallas, and bring her with me. I know how anxious she is to see you again."

"I wonder what Phelan would think of that for 'raw' work," thought Alwyn as the old lady bustled into the inner room, leaving Dallas and himself alone. Perhaps Dallas, too, understood, for her manner was less assured than usual as her eyes met his.

"It is so good—so good to see you again," he said. "It seems years instead of months since you went away."

"But how splendidly you've filled the time! And what a magnificent fight you made! I was so proud of you, Alwyn."

"Really? I remember you once said I was a mere ladder—a rich man's son—and that you weren't at all proud of me."

"That is past. We must forget it. You are awake now."

"Forget it? Not for worlds. I owe all my success to you, Dallas. It was your face that strengthened me when there seemed no hope. It was the memory of your words that kept me brave and made me resolve to win against all odds. You were my inspiration, the light in my darkness. At each step I thought 'Dallas would be glad if Dallas would not approve of this.' And I steered my course accordingly to victory."

"No, no," murmured the girl. "It was your own courage, your strength."

"Not mine. It was your faith in me. Do you know, I think no man ever accomplishes anything by himself. There is always a woman, I think, behind every great achievement. The world at large does not see her—does not know of her existence—but she's in the heart of the man who is making the fight. He battles in her name as he does the knights of old, and the triumph is hers, not his. Whether the reward is the crown of love or the crown of thorns, she is the inspiration."

"Then if I had a share in your success I am very happy, Alwyn, for your name is in every mouth. You are the man of the hour, even as you were in the olden days on the football field. Oh, I am proud of you—very, very proud! There is a glorious future before you."

"That all rests in your dear hands," cried Alwyn.

"Future or present, Dallas, it's all the same. If only you—"

"Bennett," said the boss, his burning rage, steadied down to a white heat, far more dangerous, but less incoherent, "you and me are talking too much and saying too little. We've got to come to a showdown. You're a clever boy and you made a rattling good fight, and you're on the right side of the public and of the press too. You're the best material we've got, and if you try and do the right thing there's no limit to what you can rise to—but only if you do the right thing."

"The right thing," echoed Bennett. "What do you mean by the right thing?"

"I mean you've got to do the right thing by the men who put you where you are today."

"That's fair. But who put me where I am today?"

"I did—I, Dick Horrigan. Who ever heard of you till I took you up? No body. If I didn't make you mayor, who did, I'd like to know."

"The voters. The people of this city."

"The voters," scoffed Horrigan. "The voters they did! Who had you nominated?"

"You did. But it was the public who elected me, and I'm going to obey your orders in one thing. I'm going to do the right thing by the men who put me where I am today. I'm going to pay the voters for their trust in me by giving them a fair and square administration. In the case of this Borough Street railway franchise bill, for instance, tapping the document lying before him on his desk, "before I sign that bill I intend to make sure it's for the good of the people, that it is for the good of the city, not merely for the good of Dick Horrigan and a clique of his friends and hangers-on. No, I don't swear. I'd do you no good. I'm firm on this matter. If you're dissatisfied with me it's your own fault. I warned you months ago that if I was elected I should keep my oath of office. As for this Borough bill—"

"As for this Borough bill," broke in Horrigan savagely, "you'll sign it. If you don't—"

"Well?" queried Bennett, as the boss paused, choked by his own fury. "If I don't sign it, what then?"

"If you don't, your political career is ended from this time on. So?"

"Smashed flat," you think of yourself as a fine, promising young man who's on the way to the governorship and all that. Well, what'll happen to you when I sign this bill? You'll be a man of my word, I'll pledge you to sign it, and you'll have that bill put through. The bill will sign your name on it."

"I paid my own election expenses. You know that."

"Your personal expenses, perhaps. But you paid for parades, balls, tournaments, fireworks, speakers, advertisements, workers and watchers and all the other million things that elected you. The men behind that Borough bill paid them. And they did it on the understanding you'd sign the bill."

"In other words," remarked Bennett, "you made a bargain for me. Well, I can't keep it."

"Oh, I'll keep it all right. You'll sign that bill or you'll—"

"Mr. Horrigan," exclaimed Bennett, controlling his temper with more and more difficulty, "you said something just now about our coming to a showdown. This is the time for it. I want you to remember hereafter that I wear my man's collar—your collar, if you please—and that you can't deliver my goods you're bargained for in my name. If I sign that bill it won't be under your orders, but because I think it right."

"Oh," laughed Horrigan, who thought he began to see the drift of the other's mind. "I don't hold out for that. I don't care what you sign it as long as you sign it."

"What do you think about the bill yourself?" inquired Alwyn. "Do you consider it honest?"

"What do I care? It's got to be signed, and—"

"I care. And I think the bill is fraudulent."

"Getting tender in the conscience, aren't you? Well—"

"If you put it that way, yes. I think this Borough bill is crooked from first to last. But—"

"What's the matter with it? Ain't it?"

"Let me explain," pursued Alwyn. "This bill gives the Borough Street Railway company the right to use whatever motive power they choose. It gives them the right to charge five cent fares without any transfers. It gives them the right to charge penalties for late payment. If they want one, by another paragraph they can build a conduit and lease it out for telephone or telegraph wires. If they want that, they can do so. Express business. But all these provisions are as nothing compared to the fact that the bill gives the streets above and below ground to the Borough company forever and ever—not for a term of years, but until the end of the world. It delivers that route to the company not only for our time, but for always, and binds us and our descendants to its terms. That is the chief outrage of the whole thing. To think that the—"

"Oh, we've got a howling reformer in the mayor's seat, have we?" scoffed Horrigan. "If I'd known that—"

"The people have got a man who is trying to protect their rights and property. Here's a letter I received to-day. You'll recognize the name of the capitalist who wrote it. You know he is honest as well as wise. This is his proposition: He will pay $2,000,000 for that same franchise, give the city 10 per cent of the gross receipts and turn over the whole plant to it at the end of fifty years. What do you think of that?"

"It's a take,"

"It's a bona fide offer. He volunteers to deposit $1,000,000 to bind the bargain. Now, what I want to ask you, Mr. Horrigan, is this: If the franchise is worth $2,000,000, why are you and your faction in the board of aldermen so anxious to give it away for nothing?"

"Look here!" blustered the boss. "I am looking," returned Bennett. "I've been looking deeper into it than you realize. I asked you a question just now. I'll answer it myself in one word—'Graft.' That is why you want to give away a franchise that is worth $2,000,000."

"Graft!" snorted Horrigan contemptuously. "The same old reformer howl! What's your idea of graft anyway?"

"Graft is unearned increment. Money to which the recipient has no legal or moral right. That is—"

"So! Then show me the man who isn't a grafter. A lawyer shows his client how to evade the law, and he takes a fee for doing it. What's that but graft? A magazine takes pay for putting an advertisement in its editor. When a congressman votes for an appropriation because another congressman has agreed to vote for one of his, what's that? Graft! When a five thousand a year senator retires at the end of ten years worth a million, what's that? Graft! A police captain on $2,000 a year buys yachts and country estates. Graft! How about the railroad president who gets stock free in a corporation that ships over his road, or the insurance man or banker who gives or takes fat loans on fancy securities and clears 1,000 per cent? Thieves, all of 'em! Thieves! Every one grafts who can or who isn't too stupid. Show me a man who doesn't graft and I'll show you a fool. Present company not excepted."

"That's where you're wrong," returned Alwyn, ignoring the snarl and speaking with a calm, steady oddity at contrast with the boss' ebullience. "The man who said 'Honesty is the best policy' knew what he was talking about. It pays best not only hereafter, but here as well. Why did Missouri choose Folk for governor? Because in spite of his faults he is honest. Why was La Follette sent to the senate from Wisconsin? Because, faults and all, he was honest. Why did the people of Massachusetts make Roosevelt their president? Because they knew he was honest. That is why I want you to sign that bill. It's the only way to get the best of the boss."

"You won't, eh?" retorted Horrigan, who saw that Alwyn was not to be moved. "You'll sign it, or I'll pass the bill over your veto. That'll show you pretty well how you and me stand as to power in the city. I'll make you the laughingstock of the administration by taking the whole thing out of your hands and passing it in my sole name."

"I don't care," answered Bennett, pale, but meeting coolly the fiery wrath in Horrigan's little red eyes. "I intend to fight your Borough bill in the aldermanic chamber and outside that council. To pass a bill over my veto you'll have to get a two-thirds majority. That means fourteen votes. You have only four solid votes. And I'll make it four business to see you don't get a fourteenth vote."

"I'll look out for that, all right, all right."

"One thing more, Mr. Horrigan. I have reason to believe there is bribery in this matter. I'll ferret out the name of every man who gives or takes a bribe in connection with the Borough franchise bill, and I'll send every one of them to jail—not only the aldermen, but the capitalists who are behind the measure. Receiver and thief shall go to jail together."

"Is that so?" chuckled Horrigan. "Then, Mr. Bennett, let me tell you, who is really behind this whole affair, the man who will have to fall first of all. Mr. Charles Walworth, uncle of the girl you're trying to marry."

"He leaned back to note the effect of his revelation, but Bennett's face showed no muscle, gave no hint of what lay beneath."

"Besides," went on Horrigan, eager to press his advantage, "every cent of Miss Walworth's fortune, and of her brother's, has been put by Walworth into Borough Street stock. If the franchise is beat, that stock will collapse and Miss Walworth will be a pauper. You'll beggar the girl you're in love with and your young brother if you veto that bill. Now, go ahead and say you like it."

"It was Horrigan's trump card, and he had played it well. White, silent, Bennett walked back to his desk. The fight seemed all knocked out of him. Heavily he moved, like a man overexhausted. Picking up a pen, he wrote rapidly, then cast aside the pen, crossed to the window and looked out into the snowy, crowded park.

"You've signed the bill?" cried Horrigan in delight.

"I've vetoed it," replied Bennett.

Quick Road Work.
Bright and early one morning twenty-two farmers living south of Trenton, N. J., undertook the task of putting a quarter mile stretch of road in a passable condition. It was as determined a set of men as ever assembled for a purpose. Every man was a volunteer and gave his service freely. Their work was admirably accomplished, and a road that was fraught with danger for travelers was in a single day transformed into one that may now be used for heavy drag, as well as for pleasure. The number of loads of chert hauled during the day by the farmers amounted to over 200.
